The stage adaptation of the hugely popular British TV series is on its way to the Earl Arts Centre this November. René, Edith, Michelle, Herr Flick, Helga, Yvette, Leclerc, the Fallen Madonna with the Big Boobies are all there, conveniently speaking English with peculiar accents.

If you thought that Adolf Hitler should have been blown up, this is your opportunity to see a number of blow-up Hitlers. You can also ogle Mimi, Yvette and Helga if that is your inclination, while empathizing with the hapless René as he struggles to maintain his equilibrium in war-torn France.

What about the cockatoo? Well, you'd better come & see 'Allo 'Allo!

Move over Nicholas Cage & John Travolta, it's time for Andy Allison to...

FACE-OFF

In order for Andy Allison to best achieve the look of his character and convincingly deliver his famous line "It is I, Leclerc..." he needs to age. Seriously age. And it's going to be achieved through the prosthetic and make-up magic of Mel Cooper and David Barratt.

But to make good prosthetic pieces for the face, you need to take a face cast. So poor Andy (yes, it really is him under all that goo) underwent the process to create one.

One of the greatest British TV comedies ever written comes to the Earl Arts Centre this November. This stunning new stage production follows the hilarious adventures of Rene, a hapless café owner in war-torn occupied France, as he and his wife Edith struggle to keep for themselves a priceless portrait stolen by the Nazis and hidden in a sausage in their cellar. Rene must also keep secret from his wife his long-running affairs with two waitresses or losing his cherished café may be the least of his problems!
